A team belonging to Howard Crouch, a rancheman, broke away from a hitching post on Kiowa street yesterday morning and finally plunged into the branch of Shook's Run on the east side. The point where the horses went over the bank was several feet high and the wagon landed on top of the team. A large force of men soon gathered and extricated the animals which were little injured, strange to say.

THE ITATA'S FATE.

The Insurgent Steamer Will Be Taken to San Diego.

THE CHARLESTON IN CHARGE

The Chilian Crew are Naturally Indisposed to Help a Prize. It Is Not Thought the Data Can be Forfeited. Rumors and Surmises.

[illegible] The Itata has been delivered to the American school with [illegible] rounds of ammunition. The Itata was now returning to San Diego under escort.

THE ITATA'S FATE.

Washington, June 5. Secretary Tracy received no word yesterday or last night respecting the Itata. He says the news of the decision to send the ship to San Diego had not reached San Francisco.

The news received confirms the report that the officers and crew of the Itata will be sent to their liberty by accordance with the vessel to San Diego, and it is felt as it was reported from Mexico that the commander of the insurgent warship Pinto resigned as captain of the Itata so far as Acapulco, there are good reasons why he at least should not return to the United States. So it may be necessary for Admiral Meade to detail some of his own men to act as the crew.

In official circles it is believed that the Itata is not likely to suffer heavily as the result of her escapade. Credence is given to the statement telegraphed from Chili that the vessel took the contraband arms and ammunition from the Robert and Minnie on the high seas out of the United States jurisdiction. If this should be true, the offence against the neutrality laws is minimized and it is very doubtful if a case could be made out against her. In the present state of uncertain construction of law, there is little doubt that she can be held on other charges, such as contempt of court in sailing away while under injunction, kidnapping the marshall and sailing without clearance papers, but these are minor offenses whose punishment is likely to take the shape of a fine and not go to the length of forfeiture of the vessel.

Attorney-general Miller said today that the department of justice would take no action in the case of the Itata until that vessel had been turned over to the law officers of the government at San Diego, Cal., when the course usual in such cases would be followed, that is, [illegible] would be tried and held subject to the findings of the proper legal tribunal.

The only dispatch received at the navy department today from Admiral Meade was one correcting the statement as to the location of the Itata when the arms were transferred to it from the schooner Robert and Minnie. This transfer, the dispatch says, took place off San Clement's island, a few miles from the coast, instead of San Diego harbor. The location of the transfer may be of importance in determining the question of the jurisdiction of the United States courts.

The machinery of the Itata is in bad condition and it will take a good deal of time to put it in order. The Itata will then sail for San Diego escorted by the Charleston. The insurgent Junta alleges that the arms were transferred from the Robert and Minnie to the Itata near the island San Clemente, and therefore not in violation of American law. The Junta therefore hopes to obtain possession of the munitions of war.

The Case of the Itata.

Washington, June 5.—The case of the Itata is not yet in the custody of the department of justice and will not be until that vessel reaches San Diego, Cal. The usual course, Attorney-General Miller said today, will then be pursued. The vessel will be libelled and the case tried in the courts. If she is found guilty of having violated the neutrality laws she will be confiscated, if not she will be released. The same course is now being pursued with the Robert and Minnie.

Naval Officials Incredulous.

Washington, June 5.—The account which came from San Francisco yesterday of the naval engagement in Valparaiso harbor, stating that the insurgent cruiser Magallenes shot under the guns of the government fort and almost totally annihilated the government's torpedo boats, is received with incredulity at the navy department. Such facts as are officially known seem to discredit the story. The engagement is reported to have taken place April 28, in the presence of the foreign men-of-war. Admiral McCann was there on that date, on board the Baltimore, yet in a report to the department on the next day he failed to mention any such event. In addition to this the department officers say they have no doubt that if an engagement with such pronounced results had taken place the news would have been promptly telegraphed to the United States instead of taking the slower course of the mail steamer.

The Directors Stand by Prof. Briggs.

New York, June 5.—For three hours this afternoon the directors of the Union Theological seminary sat in secret session discussing the case of Dr. Briggs. A resolution was adopted at the meeting upholding the former action of the directors regarding the transfer of Dr. Briggs from the Davenport professorship of Hebrew to the new Edward Robinson professorship of biblical theology. The resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That the board of directors, after having taken legal advice and after due consideration, see no reason to change their minds on the subject of the transfer of Dr. Briggs and feel bound in the direction of their duties under their charter and constitution to adhere to the same.

"This is all," said Treasurer Knoedler, "that we can make public of the meeting with the exception that there were two dissenting votes upon the passage of the resolution. The other points realized are deferred until after we hear from the general assembly."

The fact that a struggle was in progress behind closed doors was evident when Prof. George A. Prentiss staggered out of the hall after the discussion had been under way for two hours and nearly sank to the floor through weakness brought on by over excitement. The venerable professor's body shook like a leaf and he had to be assisted to a private room until he had recovered. Then Dr. Hastings left his place in the meeting and accompanied the professor to his home. Only one ballot was taken on the resolution and the vote stood 21 to 2 in favor of its passage. The directors of the seminary express ignorance as to the duties of the committee of fifty appointed by the general assembly, but say that they will receive them with all the courtesy possible when they visit this city. It is evident now, in the face of the present action of the seminary directors, that the visit of the general assembly committee will be useless.

LONDON GOSSIP.

English Talk About Germans, Russians and Themselves.

[Copyright 1891 by the United Press.]

London, June 5.—St. Petersburg advices state that the persecution of the Jews has taken a new phase. The Russian authorities, after having abused, impressed and compelled many thousands of the unfortunate race to leave the country, are now anxious to prove that the Jews are criminals and deserve the punishment inflicted on them before any charge was made. Therefore the police have seized the books of a number of synagogues containing the Jewish record of marriages and it is hoped to secure evidence that legitimate marriages have been common and that Hebrews, after obtaining worthless divorces from the rabbis, have married again in violation of the law. How far the effort to detect such crimes will succeed remains to be seen.

Among the Americans present at the state ball given by the Princess and Prince of Wales were Lady Butler, Mrs. Stanley Clark, Mrs. Carrington, Mrs. Frank Evans, Miss Becky Grant and her sister Addie. It was one of the most brilliant affairs that the metropolis has witnessed for years.

Kreutzenick, at Dortmund, Westphalia, have been blown up by an explosion, which killed four and seriously injured several other persons.

Terrible damage has been done by lightning at Troppau in Austrian Silesia. Many houses were burned, having been set on fire by the electric fluid, and three persons were killed. A woman is said to have died of fright during the storm and a large number huddled about the church praying and crying out while others fought to extinguish the flames.

The kaiser evidently regards his coming visit to England as an important historical event. He has requested Herr Rudolph Wimmer of Munich, and other painters, to proceed to that country and prepare to depict on canvas the more important incidents of his visit, including his public interview with his grandmother and his presentation at the guild hall. The kaiser is said to be utterly astonished at the baccarat trial, as in Germany nobody playing against the heir to the throne would think for a moment of winning.

[Copyright 1891 by the New York Associated Press.]

London, June 5.—Mr. Balfour's proposal to relax the coercion act will not be explicitly announced in the house of commons until next week, but enough is known as to what the government intends to propose, to justify the conservatives in feeling some little pride over the results of Mr. Balfour's policy. All the provisions of the act directed against criminal conspiracy will be withdrawn whilst other provisions, notably the secret inquiry section, will be retained. Mr. Balfour's first statement that while there are 3000 prisoners in Ireland who were released under the ordinary law, there are only twenty-one who were sentenced under the crimes act has been the occasion of the Unionist press making contrasts with the coercion policy under Mr. Gladstone when the prisons were chock full. In the face of comparisons and in face also of the fact of absolute peace in every district in Ireland and the expressions of discontent, the Gladstonians find it difficult to respond to the Unionist plaps. The accepted Liberal explanation is that the pacification of Ireland is due as much to the Gladstonian policy of conciliation as to Mr. Balfour's coercive measures and further that the Dublin executive has long been playing with coercion, and when the coercive screw is put in hand crime has run up and when the screw is loosened crime has run down. These explanations ignore the Gladstonian prediictions when the crimes bill was under discussion in parliament that such an awful piece of brutal despotism from which the czar or the sultan might well shrink, would produce a crop of dynamite and other outrages that would appall the civilized world. Doubtless a number of causes operated to associate the Balfour regime with the steady cessation of disorder, but the blindest partisanship cannot refuse Mr. Balfour the credit of attaining the results which his persistent policy aimed at. His administration has seen the National League broken to pieces, the plan of campaign collapsed, and coercion suspended after four years of operation. Mr. Gladstone's latest utterance on home rule is his writing to the Women's Liberal federation that the Irish crisis is as acute as ever, and home rule is a dead plank of the Liberal platform as certain as ever, but that Irish questions are asleep as far as electorate interest goes with acquiescence in Ireland.

The land bill is still likely to occupy the house for a week. Mr. Balfour has sent a message of peace and good will to every land tenant in accepting the clause enabling a landlord to sell a holding over the head of the man in possession to an evicted tenant or his predecessor. Evicted tenants can claim a pre emptive right and will be only able to be benefitted by the clause within six months after the act passes, but the provision saves from ruin many a victim of the plan of campaign.

UNDER THE ROSE.

A Horrible Scandal Beneath the Baccarat Cloth.

A HALF-FORGOTTEN CRIME.

How the Crime Proposed Himself Like an English Gentleman. English Public Indignation Prejudiced the Trial.

New York, June 5.—A London cable says: [illegible] the most sensational day [illegible] the Tranby Croft baccarat case. Mrs. Wilson, who was [illegible] by the Prince of Wales [illegible] to be the witness of the day, told the story of the game and their share in it. [illegible] story has been told. [illegible] Mr. Wilson [illegible] the witness box, [illegible] the part of Sir Edward Clarke, who, the best opponent to the English throne was on the witness stand, [illegible] the second, political and professional death knell of the Prince of Wales, that, were it uncovered to the light of day, would almost rival the celebrated and not yet forgotten Mordaunt case, which, seen in the knowledge that the unfortunate woman it was claimed had been the victim, was to be [illegible] the fortnightly balls of an asylum for the insane, the future king of England went into the witness box and, to use a phrase, which has become historical, "perjured himself like an English gentleman" to shield himself in some degree from an outburst of righteous indignation on the part of an outraged public opinion.

Feeling Against the Prince.

London, June 5.—The developments of the baccarat trial have aroused strong nonconformist feeling against the class of which the Prince of Wales is the leader, and from the talk in the lobbies of parliament to-day there is evidently fear that the disclosures may effect the election unfavorably for the conservatives. Among the nobility and gentry the conduct of the prince excites neither surprise nor objection. It is among the middle classes and the poor that severe comments are heard on the incidents of Tranby Croft. England has grown more critical since the days of the Mordaunt [illegible] and the opinion of the multitude is evidently disposed to hold the prince to responsibility for his indulgence in gambling. A leading radical remarked today that the Cumming scandal would have an influence on the future of Great Britain that could not be measured in this generation. As stated in these dispatches on Wednesday, Lord Middleton, brother-in-law of Sir William, has been his backer from the first in the effort to redeem his name from disgrace and his lordship's appearance in court today was the open assertion of the sympathy he has all along felt and displayed for his unfortunate relative. Cumming has many friends also among the audience and the fair portion especially seem to be his attentive admirers.

The Baccarat Case.

London, June 5.—On this, the fifth day of the trial of the famous baccarat scandal suit, there was a repetition inside and outside of the court of the peculiar scenes which have been witnessed during the four days past. Interest in this sensational case does not seem to diminish in the slightest degree, in fact, to judge by the early hour at which the crowds began to assemble, it is safe to say that the interest in the fate of Sir William Gordon Cumming increases as the case wears on.

The tall soldierly plaintiff was among the early arrivals in court. Upon this occasion Sir William was accompanied by his brother, Lord Middleton, who it seems has resolved to support the unfortunate baronet with his presence during these, the last acts in the baccarat developments, in order to show the jury, the lord chief justice, the Prince of Wales, the defendants and the public, that the plaintiff is not entirely friendless in the terrible uphill fight in which he is engaged.

The Prince of Wales, affable as ever and as faultlessly dressed as all the other principals in the queen's bench panorama, was also among those who arrived and took their seats before the official opening of the court. The ladies as usual were strongly represented, apparently utilizing to the utmost this opportunity of displaying the contents of their wardrobes, so far as spring and summer costumes are concerned.

The court opened promptly at 10.30 a. m. The proceedings were upon the point of commencing with the resumption of the cross-examination of Mrs. Lycett Green, when the foreman of the jury, addressing the lord chief justice, said that the jurymen were desirous of inspecting the counters which, as shown by Young Wilson's testimony yesterday, were the property of the Prince of Wales. These counters, by direction of the lord chief justice, were then passed to the jury box, and the jurymen, particularly the bold subject who has become a historical personage by "daring" to question the Prince of Wales while the latter was in the witness box, examined the £10, £5 and £2 representatives with much interest, and in a solemn and mysterious manner, as if expecting to read on their surfaces some further clue to the unravelling of the baccarat mystery, for mystery it still seems to be to many people in spite of the testimony presented; as unprejudiced people join in admitting that the motive of the baronet in bringing the suit has been demonstrated by the motive of the Wilson family in their apparent bitterness. Rumors in both these connections, in which ladies' names are mentioned, still fill the air.

When the jury had completed their inspection of the Prince of Wales' private counters, the cross examination of Mrs. Lycett Green was resumed. Mrs. Green was pale and nervous and seemed terribly anxious to get through with her share of the trial. But Sir Edward Clark is too able a lawyer to lose any points on account of a lady's nervousness, so he began his cross examination by making the young lady go again all over the ground which she had traversed yesterday in regard to the position of the tables, of the players at the tables, and as to the instances of cheating upon the part of Sir William Gordon Cumming, and as to the number of times the cheating had occurred, etc. After this overturning of testimony thoroughly refreshed the jurors' minds in regard to Mrs. Green's evidence and once more placed the solution clearly before the jury, Sir Edward Clark, addressing the witness, said:

"You don't know much about the game, do you?"

"Oh! yes, I do!" quickly and indignantly replied that young lady.

The solicitor-general then branched off into an entirely new line of thought and asked Mrs. Lycett Green several questions as to whether or not she was acquainted with a man named Bowles. Mrs. Green replied in substance that she did not know a man named Bowles.

After some further question, Mrs. Arthur Wilson, the mother of young Mr. Arthur Stanley Wilson, was called to the witness stand and Mrs. Lycett Green resumed her seat in the midst of a group of defendants behind Sir Charles Russell, their legal champion. Mrs. Arthur Wilson, replying to Sir Charles Russell's questions, said she was present at Tranby Croft in the room where, on September 8, the defendants played baccarat. Mrs. Wilson distinctly remembered her son, Arthur Stanley Wilson, looking at her with a pleading expression in his face and that he afterward made a "horrible communication" to her. It was to the effect that he had seen the plaintiff, Sir William Gordon Cumming, cheating while playing cards. Mrs. Wilson then repeated to the court the evidence which had already been given as to the manner in which the baronet cheated. She said that an obstacle came out of his left hand dropping it across the line with a period when the card turned up was favorable to him.

Mrs. Arthur Wilson then said she had an interview with the Prince of Wales on the subject on the following day and that she expressed fears that her son, Arthur Stanley Wilson, would suffer from the effects of what had transpired on account of the fact that he had been the first person to notice and call attention to the cheating. Upon this point she said the Prince of Wales listened to all she had to say on the subject, and then told her that he would do everything possible that there was to be done to keep the matter from coming into court. Mrs. Wilson continued, she said, she had never spoken nothing to anybody outside of those of her own family who were already acquainted with the facts regarding the case. It was, she said, too much for her to think of and she tried to forget it as much as possible.

Mrs. Wilson was then turned over to Sir Edward Clark for cross examination, and in reply to the solicitor-general's question, she said that she had not signed a paper pledging herself to secrecy. But Mrs. Wilson admitted the Prince of Wales had asked her not to say anything about the affair. Mrs. Wilson here added that on September 9th she did not even tell her husband about the occurrence which had caused so much distress at Tranby Croft because he, Mr. Wilson, [illegible] late hour, and she thought it best not to trouble him until the next day. Answering a question put to her by the leading counsel for the plaintiff, Mrs. Wilson said that

On the night of September 9th the Prince of Wales asked her if it was not possible to provide a proper baccarat table for the night following. This, Mrs. Wilson explained, was before the prince knew anything of the attempted cheating on the part of Sir William Gordon Cumming, consequently for the next second night's play, that of Sept. 9, a fresh table was provided, but this was not done on account of Sir William Gordon Cumming, though it was hoped that its use would prevent a recurrence of the evidence of the previous night. The witness' husband, Mr. Arthur Wilson, Sr., she continued, had objected to baccarat playing because in his opinion the play might become high "among hot-headed boys" [laughter]. On a previous occasion, she continued, the sum of five hundred pounds had got into the bank which amount her husband had thought was too large.

"Why didn't you tell the Prince of Wales that your husband objected to baccarat?" asked Sir Edward Clark.

"Because," replied Mrs. Wilson, "we were such a staid, non-gambling party, that we did not think that there could be much harm from a quiet game at baccarat."

"And," continued the solicitor-general, "although you had been told that one of your guests had been cheating, you sat at the next night's play."

"Yes," answered Mrs. Wilson quietly, "I had put it out of my mind. I had a lot of other things to think about."

Mrs. Wilson at another stage of her cross examination admitted in reply to Sir Edward Clark's question, that £15 was the highest stake which she saw played on the table during the two evening's play, and she did not think that anybody staked even that amount till her husband did so, during the second night's play. Adjourned until Monday.

General Gray's Bones Dug Up.

People can't rest in their graves nowadays because those who are alive desire to satisfy a curiosity not altogether laudable, or to establish some historical fact. For these reasons the pyramids have been sacked, and the tombs of extinct American races broken open. The latest event in the line of research is reported from Hunterdon county, N. J., where a historical society has just exhumed, on a farm in the outskirt of Flemington, what is said to be the remains of General Gray, who led a British raid into the town in 1778, and captured 300 muskets. On leaving the place the land was attacked and the general killed. Tradition has always had it that the body was buried on this farm. The society finally concluded to make search, and they now have the skull, ribs and one foot, together with several brass buttons bearing the letters "Q. L. D.," meaning doubtless "Queen's Light Dragoons." Great interest is manifested in the discovery.

Wealthy, Charitable and Childless.

Since the death of Sir Moses Montefiore no Hebrew has so magnificently emulated his charities as Baron Hirsch, who has devoted untold sums to alleviate the misfortunes of his unhappy brethren, particularly in Russia. The fortune of Baron Hirsch is estimated variously at from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. He is the son of a Bavarian banker, and the foundation of his wealth was a railway contract with the Turkish government. Since then he has made enormous sums by railroad operations in eastern Europe and by fortunate speculations on the Paris bourse. He has a magnificent house in Paris, a splendid estate in Bavaria, where his entertainments have been on a scale of regal magnificence, and some of the finest shooting preserves to be found in Great Britain. His only son died some time ago.

The Latest Novelty in Jewelry.

Signatures in gold are the latest novelties of the day brought out by ingenious jewelers. Handsome lace pins are made out of thin sheet gold, the design of which is the signature of the fair one by whom the brooch is worn. The signature is clipped from the end of a letter or other source and handed to the designer, who carefully examines it through a good magnifier until he gets a perfect idea of its characteristics and of the possibilities of developing effect. Then, with a thin sheet of gold in his hand and a delicate pair of nicely tempered scissors, along with a hair file, the signature is reproduced on the precious metal in a very short time.

Sanguine of Brazil's Success.

Dom Pedro still proves loyal to the land over which he ruled. Doubtless he would like to end his days as the restored emperor of Brazil, but he sees too clearly to entertain prejudice, and declares that the experiment of Brazilian self government will prove a success. "My countrymen will hold their place among nations" is his latest assertion.

Announcing Broken Engagements.

The fashion now prevalent at Amsterdam is not likely to meet with much favor in America. The Dutch aristocrats, and commoners as well, make it a custom to give to the breaking of engagements as wide a publicity as attends betrothals or marriages. Thus a girl's record is a fair one becomes known, and faithless young men find that limits are put to their flirtations exploits.

Her Mourning Days Are Over.

Prince Rudolph of Austria, who met death because he invaded another man's home, left a widow, the Grand Duchess Stephanie. She is a young looking and beautiful woman. She recently laid aside the weeds worn in perfunctory mourning for her faithless husband, and is now with a party of gay friends enjoying a coaching trip through Italy.

Typewriters Studying Law.

It is said by one who claims to know that very few of the many girls now studying law ever expect to practice this profession. Numbers of the students are typewriters in law offices, and desire to gain sufficient knowledge of Blackstone to make their labors more valuable in their particular calling.

FOUR GRADUATES.

Commencement Exercises of Colorado Springs High School.

WHERE BROOK AND RIVER MEET

Large Audience at the Opera House to Witness the Exercises. Interesting Orations and Essays. Prof. Turnbull Delivers the Farewell Address.

At the opera house last evening occurred the commencement exercises of the students of the Colorado Springs high school, this being one of the most interesting events of the year in Colorado Springs, as it really is to those interested in educational matters, and is anxiously awaited by many people. It is also a busy time for a large gathering of people, for flowers, orations and essays abounded. The exercises lasted two hours, although as successful as those of former years, although the class was small. At an early hour the opera house began to fill up with those who had secured tickets, and at the time for the exercises there was a fair gathering. The opera house presented a very fine appearance. On the stage, which contained plants, and at the back of the stage were tall palms, the effect being most pleasing. Seated upon the stage were seated the graduates and Messrs. Hemenway, Humphrey and Mrs. Dunbar of the board of education; Professors Pattison and Turnbull and teachers of the public schools, Mayor Stratton, Revs. Mellen, Lucas and Keiffer, members of the alumni and others.

There were four graduates this year. Winnie Estella Belcher and William B. Wolffe in the classical course, Hubert A. Gale and Minnie Avonia Nevins in the scientific course. It was a bright, well dressed and good looking class as it sat ranged upon the stage and provoked much favorable comment.

During the evening the Centennial State band was present and rendered a number of its choicest selections. The band received much praise. After the first selection of music Rev. A. R. Keiffer opened the programme with prayer. The invocation was brief but earnest and asked for the divine blessing, particularly for the young graduates.

Professor Pattison presided and introduced the speakers in his easy, graceful way. The first introduced was Miss Winnie Belcher, who read an essay, "Who are the Aristocrats?" Miss Belcher spoke in a clear tones and every word of her excellent paper was heard by those present.

Miss Belcher began by giving a brief outline of the history of aristocracy of the beginning of feudalism and hereditary property. Following this she discussed the aristocracy of wealth, too much of which, she says, is found. In comparison with hereditary and feudal aristocracy it has marked advantages. Feudal aristocracy separates the people. Hereditary aristocracy causes war and bloodshed. Russia the speaker cited as a good example of how much suffering is caused by the tyrannous rule of an absolute monarchy. The aristocracy of wealth brings people together; it represents peace and not war; it creates good deeds, and is a help to the world. The aristocracy of wealth is not necessarily immoral, and when its power is exerted in the right direction it is a source of great good. The speaker cited the disadvantages of wealth, of the temptation to use it as a power for self aggrandizement, of its tendency to weaken the morals, and of its tendency to oppress the poor. She showed how the hereditary aristocracy came to grief when it became oppressive to the people, and believed that the American people might safely be trusted to dispose of a money aristocracy. After discussing the hereditary and money aristocracy she came to a higher and truer "aristocracy"—one of honor, generosity, charity and virtue of which we have many examples from the time our republic was first established, and whose members have shown themselves to the world under the names of Lincoln, Franklin, Washington, and many others whose characters have been universally respected and honored. This last aristocracy is one that all can realize, and in the pursuit of which the more goodness and energy we display the [illegible] in striving to reach this good we do not hinder but help our fellow men. The democratic principles upon which our government is established make our country peculiarly well-fitted for the growth of a "true aristocracy."

Following this number the High School glee club, a double trio, sang "The Foot Travelers" so excellently that they were compelled to respond to an encore. Prof. Pattison then introduced Mr. Hubert Gale, whose oration was entitled "Russia." Mr. Gale held the attention of his audience, for his manner was easy and he spoke without hesitation. Mr. Gale in substance spoke as follows:

In former times those nations which excelled in war were considered the greatest, and they became wealthy and powerful. The people were trained only in physical strength; intellectual and moral exceptions prevailed. Decay was inevitable, and these nations fell. Nations of a latter day, seeing their errors, have sought after a foundation on which success would be assured. Now, in order that a state may be truly great, it must be physically, morally and intellectually strong. Every man governed must think and act for the nation, must have a voice in the affairs of government, and being thus allowed freedom of thought and speech he becomes a part of the nation, and its welfare becomes his. But, on the other hand, let this freedom of thought and speech be taken away from the people and they turn and hate and rebel against laws imposed upon them. Ever since its foundation the government of Russia has been an absolute monarchy. In its early days, the people being ignorant, were content to be under subjection to anyone who could manage their affairs. But as time advanced intercourse with other nations led them to have ideas of their own. The emperor, noticing their advancement, became alarmed and restricted their rights, and continued to restrict those rights until we find the Russian people at the present day benumbed in by a great network of oppression and tyranny. The results of this oppression can be found by comparing the Russia of the past with the Russia of today. Once it was one of the leading nations of Europe. The rights of the people were taken away and it became but a dark blot on the face of the world. Its light gone out; the grand structure torn down. Unless the tyranny and oppression of the Russian government is quickly done away with a rebellion will follow that will shake the foundations of the whole civilized world. People are beginning to realize that the liberation of Russia is necessary for the liberation of the world.

Professor Rawley, the cornetist, gave a solo following Mr. Gale's oration that was one of the best features of the musical portion of the programme. Miss Minnie Nevins was then introduced and read her essay entitled "The True Position of Woman." Miss Nevins' paper was of universal character and was read in a steady rational way manner. Said the speaker in substance:

From the earliest history, as man's world has become less selfish and more pure, has woman's world become less restricted and more independent. Years ago it was scarcely thought necessary that a woman should be educated, and it was believed that she should do nothing outside of "home work," to earn her living. People of today, however, see the matter in a different light. It is generally admitted that woman's sphere for business is narrow and she has a hard fight nearly every day. There is no natural law or order that Man was born to earn the bread we must to make the best of life. We do points out as much money as we can in the world, this proved by the failure of the several protective societies for her. Miss Nevins at this point went into a discussion of Vashti, Rosa Bonheur, Porcia, and other of Shakespeare's women, whether they were womanly or strong minded. She said they were independent. Each of these heroines wrote for herself alone without the slightest inspiring hint of her duty, not forgetting the [illegible] but for public purposes. In this is found the definition of the question, that they who [illegible] had [illegible] to do according to their [illegible]. Such [illegible] of the [illegible] than the important one of education [illegible] fall. The lecturer having [illegible] of the age are best illustrated by the [illegible] of educational and public institutions of the nation of both Europe and America. It [illegible] that attention [illegible] Boston's [illegible] called to the fact of the [illegible] opportunities open to girls. There is no doubt [illegible] on the part of leaders in the [illegible] movement to win women from their homes or to inspire them with any longing to enter politics. All they ask is to have the right to know more. With the change education will come many benefits, increased happiness and broader ideas of life. A love for home is none the less powerful when controlled by an enlightened intelligence. With due reverence for the women of former ages who performed their duties so nobly, there of today believe that they must be alive not only to the home interests but to the wider interests of the world as well.

The band played a selection from "Martha" that was one of its best numbers during the evening, and the valedictorian of the class, William B. Wolffe, was introduced. The subject of Mr. Wolffe's oration was "Landlord and Tenant in Ireland." Mr. Wolffe has a good strong voice, over which he has excellent control, and speaks with ease, that is rare in one so young in addressing public gatherings. The speaker began with the statement that the true prosperity of a nation does not depend upon the number of landlords and peasants, millionaires and tramps, but upon the number of individual land owners; upon equal rights and the moral and intellectual progress of every citizen. The solution of the social problem of modern civilization involves nothing less than the "widespread institution of private property in land." Ireland presents a picture worth contemplating as illustrating the truth of this proposition. The speaker gave some historical facts regarding the brutal treatment of Ireland by the English; touched on the rebellion of 1797 and the means taken to subdue the people. The overthrow of the Irish parliament was characterized as a most shameful instance of corruption and treachery, and the union of England and Ireland declared to have been effected by force and fraud. The treatment of the people after their several rain uprisings was pictured in all its horrors, especially the evictions of tenants. To the question "Who is responsible?" may be attributed most of misery and suffering of the Irish people. A vast majority of these people are reduced to the condition of mere tenants, whose condition must be that of extreme poverty and suffering, as the need of land is so imperative that they take any terms from the landlord. Perhaps Ireland is the only country where a man has nothing to gain by improving the land he cultivates. If he improves it he is certain to have the rent raised. The orator spoke of the methods in other days of parceling the land to the landlords, by which the present owners have secured it. He declared that there is a question whether these titles are good, as a lapse of time does not change a wrong into a right. Land is necessary to all production, and to this competition for land, this devouring of wages by rents, this appropriation of wealth by those who had no hand in producing it, may be attributed the distress and misery in Ireland. This question cannot be settled by half-way measures, but only by such judicious distribution of the land as will give every man an opportunity to better his condition. It must be settled by the recognition of equal natural right. All men should have the same privilege to use and enjoy the natural opportunities, the ever increasing advantages and all the comforts to a happy and glorious life.

At the conclusion of his oration Mr. Wolffe made his valedictory address, turning to the various parties addressed in turn. In addressing the members of the board of education the valedictorian spoke of the marked change in the course of study during the year, and hoped they would continue to agree as to the constituents of a high standard for the high school. The teachers were particularly complimented upon their superior methods of instruction, and he declared that he and his classmates were [illegible] them as they have done their duty. To the schoolmates whom the graduates are leaving he declared that they felt their confidence was not misplaced when they leave with them the management of the school paper, and that character which the pupils have always enjoyed. The address to the alumni was [illegible] and particularly touching. This class had hoped to be the first to graduate from the new high school building, but they were to be consoled by thought that others would have that pleasure. He urged all to realize the part that might be assigned him or her in the drama of human affairs, not to be contracted into any narrow sphere; to let true virtues and principles be emphasized in their hearts.

The double trio rendered another song most excellently, and Prof. Pattison, superintendent of the public schools, presented the diplomas. He said that he presented them on behalf of the board of trustees, and they signified that the receiver had finished the course of study prescribed for the High school. A year ago the speaker had the privilege of addressing the words of farewell to the graduates, but this year the duty devolved upon another, and rightfully too. The graduate had taken on the first engagement in the battle of life, as it is a person's first duty to gain the elements of a fair education. It was specially a time for congratulation and a pleasure for the speaker to offer them on behalf of himself and the teachers. He then introduced Prof. Geo. Turnbull, principal of the high school.

Professor Trumbull is a pleasant speaker, and was in his happiest mood last evening. He began by referring to the class motto, "Not Finished, but Begun," and the happy frame of mind that must have suggested it. It occurred to him to ask what what it is that is begun, and the obvious answer is that it is the education. He spoke of those things that are necessary to make an educated man, and the first was to have a mind full of general learning. The world has a growing contempt for ignorance. He warned his hearers not to be betrayed by one who would send them on a single road, and dwelt upon the point eloquently. It is necessary to know something of everything, equally important to know everything of something. So wide is the field of learning that a man must choose one department and make it his home. When you have chosen the department, know all about it, and do not be content with the mere show of possession. There is no position so menial that it is not worthy of your best efforts to make a success of it. There should be a proper balance between the intellect and the imagination, and the speaker believed in what the world calls dreamers. Give a strong imagination and a well trained intellect and you have an enthusiast. The speech was filled with stories to emphasize and illustrate the various points and was decidedly interesting. Prof. Turnbull simply bid the graduates adieu.

At the conclusion of the address the glee club sang "Good night," and the audience dispersed. Many persons crowded onto the stage at the close to congratulate the graduates and teachers.

This property has a frontage of over 150 feet on Nevada avenue, and 100 feet on Pike's Peak avenue, and has 44 feet on the alley by the city clerk's office. Inside of two years this corner will be as good as the corner of Pike's Peak and Tejon streets for business purposes, if not better, for it fronts on two 110 feet avenues, and being more centrally located commands the situation, and I will sell it for one-third the price that will buy the other. Meanwhile the improvements on it pay the taxes and leave a handsome surplus.

2. The equally splendid residence property on North Tejon street, fronting 400 feet on the Rapid Transit line, running from Willamette avenue to Monument street, with a depth of 120 feet to a 20 feet alley, in a most desirable neighborhood. One-half the frontage on Tejon street and the back frontage on Willamette avenue is bordered with ten-year-old maple and locust trees. I will sell this grand property if taken at once for $35,000. Compare this with the corner, one fourth the size in Shook's Run bottom, which the school board was so glad to get for $8801, and you will see it is very cheap.

I have a large block of desirable property, consisting of lots improved and unimproved, which, while a good deal of money is required to handle it, I will sell for just one half its real worth at market prices. The improvements yield a very fair return over and above the taxes, and within two years the property should be sold at a profit of at least 100 per cent, for anyone who will invest in it now. This is really a big thing, and I will be glad to show it to anyone who means "business." None others need apply.

COUNTRY ESTATES.

1. I am authorized to offer for sale, for a short time, the charming country residence and estate, so well and favorably known as Ridgelawn, consisting of 159 acres of enclosed land, only ten miles northeast of town by a good macadamized road. This place is subdivided into four fields and seventy acres are under cultivation. No irrigation is required, good crops of grain and potatoes being raised without it. The improvements consist of a hand some house of 9 rooms and bath room with hot and cold water, water being furnished from hydraulic ram set in the fine springs which abound on the property. There is a large low, 20x30, barn with 5 box stalls, carriage, feed and chicken houses and sheds, for ten tons of hay; meat house, dairy house; ice house containing ten tons of pure ice, cut from pond covering an acre of ground near the house; and a water fountain fourteen feet deep from the springs, ever flowing and pure. There is one spring 8 feet deep, of iron and sulphur water. Also a potato "dugout" holding 20,000 lb. The residence is insured for $3000. I can sell this very desirable place for less money than has been expended in the improvements upon it. Someone can make a fortune running it as a resort for invalids at all seasons. It can be kept full all the time. The owner wishes to practice his profession in the city, or he would not think of selling.

ROWNED AT PROSPECT LAKE

THE TRUTH ABOUT TITLES

OF THE BETWEEN NOBLES AND COUNTS

Fresh nuts were served and a social hour was spent

Mr Green after great effort succeeded in reaching the beach Mr Elliott after making a few strokes in the direction of the partially sunken boat, was seen by those on the shore to throw up one arm and then disappear beneath the relentless waves not to rise again Searching parties were immediately organized and were brought into service in the attempt to find the body Drag hooks and other means were employed by willing hands from the time of the accident until 10 o'clock the body was found about half way to the shore. The body was taken at once to Fairley Bros under the direction of Coroner Markle who will hold an inquest over the remains to day, after which the body will probably be sent to the east for interment

From what it was an exceptionally bright promising young man, about 25 years of age and was a brother in-law of Mrs Elliott, daughter of Julia Ward Howe He has very honorably served a number of years in the English navy and has spent much of his time on the sea He was a good swimmer and boatman and was considered an expert in the water He had travelled very extensively and had previously met with several narrow escapes from drowning He had recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia in the spring in Chicago, and came to this city about two months ago for a season, stopping at the Bellevue Hotel and placing himself under the care of his friend, Dr Solly He had regained his strength and health and was a daily visitor at Prospect Lake where he found delight in boating He had been anxiously awaiting the arrival of the sail boat for several days desiring to enjoy a sail in it and not dreaming of the fearful end awaited him He had been expected for a number of days to take his departure for Boston to accept a responsible and highly remunerative position which remaining here to accept the position he were daily expected His sudden and sending is greatly to be deplored and his friends and relatives have the profound sympathy of our community

The engagement of the resort are all distressed on account of the occurrence, and exerted every available means to find the body at the moment possible Finding that it cannot be trusted with as an assistant man as Mr Elliott was to be, they have wisely decided to prohibit the use of sail boats on the lake in future

The Phoenix Farewell

The Phoenix literary society of Colorado closed its sessions for the season with a most entertaining program and a crowded chapel in spite of six other attractions on the evening this society can boast a large and enthusiastic audience it means that the Phoenix society has gained a reputation for entertainment This is its seventh entertainment The music which filled the essays that were interpretations of the elocutionists have been a credit to many a high school Those who have followed the Phoenix during the year may possibly be interested in a brief review of the work drawback to the remarkable music The college pianist of many years existence and a number of participants the college society their talent Taking this into consideration the music was good The Messrs Carpenter distinguished themselves as the soloists Those two gentlemen gave an encore with two selections, "Spanish Suite," receiving an encore the first The banjo club showed a number of taking airs and the audience appreciation which it deserved Last on the programme was the quartette whose four voices sang I am going to Heaven a slightly revised form of "Nearer my God to me"

Refreshments were given by some of the best caterers in the city Mr Peck in charge of the accompaniment gave a recitation of the lover's quarrel at the theatre of Paris "Tux" It was a piece, dramatic and comical the elocutionist made a good impression upon his hearers and he recited an original poem in honor of a flower girl excellently, "Cherry" told a thrilling story of a fire in the mines of Wales.

The final paper by Mr Worrall Wilson, was remarkable for the number of witty puns which it contained Other interesting features

"The Twelve Temptations."

Spectacle is certainly one of the most pleasing forms of stage amusement which finds favor with all classes, and no one has so clearly monopolized this peculiar field as William al Gilmore who is considered at the head of all diversions of this kind His second edition of The Twelve Temptations under the capable management of Charles H Yale will be seen at the Opera house on Monday evening The spectacle has undergone so many changes that aside from its title it is from all accounts a production more grand and pleasing than that which was seen last season An exchange in commenting upon the piece says

W J Gilmore's "Twelve Temptations" attracted an audience at the Grand Opera house last evening that filled the theatre An audience too that was not slow in demonstrating its admiration of the magnificent stage settings and striking transformation scenes applauding the villain when his schemes seemed to go well and applauding the hero when the good triumphed over the bad In mounting the Twelve Temptations, Mr Gilmore has passed the highest mark of the spectacular drama The scenery is the handsomest ever seen in a theatrical stage while the mechanical effects are marvelous The play abounds in special features. The ballet is strong introducing five very pretty novelties The dramatic portion of the show is so completely overshadowed by the mechanical and scenic effects that it is but a small part of the attraction There is, however an interesting plot that is worked out much clearer than is usual in spectacles, and the lines are better than the average in spectacular dramas The company is strong"

Peale, Stubbs & Co are having success with their nightly auctions which will be continued.

OF THE BETWEEN NOBLES AND COUNTS

Many Titled Adventurers Have Married Heiresses

NEW YORK

Nothing seems more unjustifiable than the assumption of titles by persons who have no right to them and yet it is a practice which is not only tolerated but encouraged by the public at large. Hardly a week passes without some Italian, Spanish or French nobleman or pretended nobleman being lionized by our society people, and the fact that he is a fortune hunter does not seem to detract from his popularity. Many of the titles are borne by men who have married heiresses, and the question is often asked why should not a man who has married a girl with a fortune be called a count or a duke as well as a man who has married a girl who has a title? The question is a pertinent one, and it is a fact that the titles of foreign nobility are not the guarantee of social position in this country that they are in their own countries and that they are in Europe. Many of the most prominent men in the Baltic provinces of Russia are titled men who have married American heiresses. The Duke of Leuchtenberg, the Prince of Ratibor, the Duke of Fermoy, the Duke of Manchester, the Duke of Marlborough, the Duke of Abercorn, the Duke of Leinster, the Duke of Sutherland, the Duke of Rutland, the Duke of Roxburghe, the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke of Bedford, the Duke of Portland, the Duke of Leeds, the Duke of Westminster, the Duke of Hamilton

THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1891.

The Mariposa Band of Mercy social has not been postponed.

A marriage license was issued yesterday to J. H. Sargent, of Larimer, Colo., and Miss M. S. Tucker, of Louisville, Ky.

In the county court yesterday the divorce case of Erickson vs. Erickson was dismissed, the plaintiff not having lived in the state one year.

The Crystal Peak Beacon of May 29th is filled with the improvements and material prosperity of Florissant. It was quite a holiday number.

Fully a dozen tags were arrested in the boy gangs in the car yards yesterday afternoon. John O'Malia was also arrested for drunkenness.

The case of Stockbridge vs. Larimer was decided in the county court yesterday morning in favor of the defendant. A notice of appeal was given.

President W. F. Slocum, of Colorado college, will supply the pulpit of the First Congregational church next Sunday, both morning and evening.

Some ladies of the city gave a pleasant dance in the Antlers pavilion last night, thirty or forty participating. Cusser's orchestra furnished the music.

The Centennial State band boys give their benefit ball on the 15th and have begun preparations for it. The ball will be preceded by a fine band concert.

Rev. R. T. Crone who has been making a vacation visit in Colorado, was suddenly called home to Minneapolis by the serious illness of his youngest child.

Mr. J. P. McMillan has purchased the triangular piece of ground in West Colorado Springs at the intersection of Grant avenue and the Bear Creek road, for $1,000.

Rev. J. H. Reed, formerly secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Reading, Pa., will speak at the association rooms to morrow afternoon at 4:15. All men are cordially invited.

Bishop Matz, assisted by Rev. Father Fox, of Michigan, and Rev. Father Montanarelli, confirmed a class of about thirty children at St. Ann's Catholic church yesterday morning.

A union meeting of the different Mariposa Bands of Mercy, Union, Garfield and Prairie, will be held to-day on Mrs. John Curr's lawn from 4 to 6 o'clock. This meeting is under the auspices of the Humane society.

Yesterday morning Miss Scarborough's school held their closing exercises with a very interesting programme. Miss May Howbert secured the $75 scholarship by a yearly average of 99 per cent. The school will reopen on September 14.

Mr. Van Golden gave his photographic entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last night. The number in attendance was much less than was merited by the excellence of the views and the speaker. Another lecture will be given in the same place next Thursday evening with European, African and American views.

The order of the Iron Hall gave an entertainment yesterday evening in the Knights of Honor hall. Addresses were made by Dr. Mutz and Messrs. F. Capell and Mr. McMahan, the latter of whom has been a member of the order for seven years and belongs to class B. J. C. Duncan also sang a number of comic songs.

Mr. John Kummerer, who was a resident of Colorado Springs for many years, died suddenly, at his home in Pueblo, last Thursday evening, of apoplexy. The funeral will take place at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning, and will be conducted by the Odd Fellows of this city and Pueblo. Members of Pike's Peak lodge and Canton Colfax are requested to report at their hall promptly at 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning to take the train for Pueblo.

The Fair.

At the Sisters' hospital fair in Weber hall last night the contests were decided for the gold-headed cane, the gold watch and the doll.

The votes were as follows: For the gold-headed cane, W. A. Hart, representing the Midland employes, 110; A. J. Lawton, representing the Rapid Transit men, 50. For the gold watch, Miss Wooster 150, Miss Sadie McCaffrey 150. For the doll, Miss Elsie Baur 90, Miss Nellie Finegan 10.

Mr. House was the winner in the raffle for the box of cigars. Mr. Metz secured the portrait of Bishop Matz, and Mrs. Stevenson won the picture entitled "Home, Sweet Home."

Man Missing.

There is somewhat of a mystery surrounding the disappearance of George Sangster, who has been in the employ of J. Greenwaldt of the Consumer's Meat market the past few weeks. He left this city on Sunday, May 24th, and was supposed to have gone to Manitou to spend the day, but as he has failed to return, his friends have become uneasy lest there may have been foul play. He is 61 years of age and has a wife in California. A reward of $25 is offered by Mr. Greenwaldt in another column, for information of the whereabouts of the gentleman. A full description of the man is given.

Mysterious Shots.

A little while after 1 o'clock last night a volley of shots was heard issuing apparently from a part of the city near the College hose house on the corner of Nevada avenue and Cache la Poudre street. Half the population of that portion of the city put their heads out of their windows and the officers in the business streets started on a run in the direction of the explosions. The driver of a bus was passing the College hose house at the time of the noise and believed the shots to issue from a cannon by the side of the house. He saw at the time two young men with bicycles near by, whom he supposed to be the perpetrators of the disturbance. Nothing, however, could be learned definitely as to the cause of the shots and those who heard them believed everything from a Colt's revolver to a tenpound cannon was in action.

It Booms Your Town.

The most successful and progressive towns are those which most liberally support their home papers. A newspaper well filled with home advertisements is a sure index of the enterprise of the place where the paper is published.—Wyandotte Union.

It Means Success.

One distinguishing feature of the present age in a body politic sense is the close and inseparable connection between printer's ink and success. Dr. Faustus is the patron saint of every Nineteenth century enterprise. Advertising is the business motto of the times, publicity its foundation principle. The advertising columns of a great newspaper form a mirror of the period, in which are faithfully reflected all its characteristics, its tendencies, its ambitions, its aspirations, its needs and its achievements. The press has thus become not only the handmaid of all undertakings, great and little, but the oracle to which the world looks for authoritative information on all the business questions in which it is interested. All the civilized countries of the earth are converted by it into one vast exchange, in which all their millions of readers are brought together. Advertising has therefore become a necessity.—Baltimore Sun.
